ABSTRACT

Indiana University established a School of Commerce and Finance in 1920. The school was renamed the School of Business Administration in 1933, and finally named the School of Business in 1938. The school operates two campuses—one in Indianapolis and one in Bloomington—following the reorganization in 1974. In 1997 the School of Business on both campuses is renamed the Kelley School of Business after alumnus E.W. Kelley.

Records include: correspondence, minutes, reports, publications, and other materials.

ACCESS

Personnel and student records and other personal information in these records are restricted. All other material is open to the public without restriction.
